Just because today in America is about giving thanks for those who fed you when you were starving, this information from the OpinionJournal of the Wall Street Journal feels quite appropriate:

?Finally, we are thankful for Australia, one of America's most reliable allies. News.com.au, soon to be a sister to this Web site, reports on some good news Down Under: The nation's breasts have had a growth spurt. Australian women, who fitted a petite 12B a decade ago, are a shapely 14C. Julie Malandin, general manager of bra maker Berlei, which conducted a study, said women were "bigger." According to BreastNotes.com, though, the average American woman is a 36C, so the Aussies have a long way to go.?

Emphasis mine. Is there any end to the cornucopia of God-given(1) wonders in this fascinating country? Glory, glory, Alleluia.

Admittedly with the helping hand of the Silicon Surgeon(2) when Mother Nature fails.

A distant relative of the Tooth Fairy. Like her much older cousin twice removed, or something.
